Etherstack Wins New Australian Federal Police Order

Etherstack today announced that it won a competitive tender process to supply tactical communications equipment to the Australian Federal Police (AFP).

This is the fourth order placed by the Commonwealth of Australia within the past 18 months associated with newly released technology product lines.

The equipment to be supplied allows the rapid deployment of ad-hoc highly secure communications networks in remote or isolated places where officers may not normally have communications coverage.

"We are very pleased that front line law enforcement officers are seeing the benefits of our leading edge communications products. We are seeing increased international demand for our new products and we are expecting further breakthrough sales with policing agencies in the US and Canada in coming months", said Etherstack CEO, David Deacon.

The AFP order was placed with Etherstack's wholly owned subsidiary Auria Wireless Pty Ltd.
